

Discover the Power of the Credential.

10-25-22

CDM®|CFPP® | Certified Dietary Manager
Certified Food Protection Professional

As the national professional organization representing and serving nutrition and foodservice professionals, the Association of Nutrition & Foodservice Professionals (ANFP) is here to serve you in your professional development and growth. The CBDM certification program is where you begin your journey to become a Certified Dietary Manager, Certified Food Protection Professional (CDM, CFPP). Comprised mainly of CDM, CFPPs, CBDM is the credentialing agency of ANFP that is responsible for establishing and upholding policies for and administration of the CBDM Certification Program and the CDM Credentialing Exam. Accredited by the National Commission for Certifying Agencies (NCCA), the CBDM Certification Program demonstrates compliance with the NCCA Standards that are designed to ensure that certification programs adhere to modern standards of practice for the certification industry. This level of excellence helps ensure your CDM, CFPP credential has meaning and value that will follow you throughout your career!

By earning the CDM, CFPP credential, you will join the top levels of nutrition and foodservice managers in the field. It can advance your career and open many new opportunities for employment! In addition, credential holders who are ANFP members have an added benefit of CE opportunities at reduced rates among many other benefits.

CDM, CFPPs are nationally recognized experts at managing foodservice operations and ensuring food safety. Many work in health care—nursing facilities, rehab centers, senior living communities, or hospitals. Some work in correctional facilities, schools, and the military. Others work for corporations.

CDM, CFPPs have the education and experience required to manage menus, food purchasing, and food preparation; and to apply nutrition principles, document nutrition information, ensure food safety, manage work teams, and much more. In the latest regulations issued by the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), the CDM, CFPP credential is now listed as the primary qualification for the Director of Food and Nutrition Services in long-term care facilities, in the absence of a full-time Registered Dietitian Nutritionist (RDN).

Working conditions may include varied hours, long days, and juggling multiple demands. CDM, CFPPs work with both people and paperwork. They tend to be energetic, results-oriented problem-solvers who thrive on challenge and enjoy teamwork. Employment in foodservice is not dependent on economic conditions, and is growing steadily. The fastest-growing segment of the market is senior living, an area where the skills of CDM, CFPPs are just what the doctor ordered!

How to Become a CDM, CFPP

A CDM, CFPP has the education and work experience to competently perform the responsibilities of a dietary manager and has proven this by passing the nationally-recognized CDM Credentialing Exam and fulfilling the requirements needed to maintain certified status. The CDM, CFPP also demonstrates specific competency in the area of food protection and sanitation.

Some managers ask: If I've completed a foodservice manager training program, am I already a CDM, CFPP? The answer is no. Keep going! To earn the credential, you need to follow three steps:

1. Qualify to take the CDM Credentialing Exam.

There are many different pathways to qualify! You may start by completing an ANFP-approved dietary manager training program. Or, you may already have a two-year or four-year degree in foodservice management, nutrition, or culinary arts. Or, you may qualify under other pathways that require a military foodservice manager program.

Details about how to qualify are on the CBDM website:
www.CBDMonline.org/eligibility.

CBDM® | Certifying Board for
Dietary Managers
The credentialing agency for Association of Nutrition & Foodservice Professionals ANFP

DISCOVER THE POWER OF THE CDM, CFPP CREDENTIAL

2. Register for the CDM Credentialing Exam.

After you submit your exam application and fees for CBDM review and approval, CBDM will send information on next steps, e.g., further required actions to qualify or next steps to schedule an exam appointment. Offered year-round at more than 300 testing centers, the computer-based exam gives you the opportunity to demonstrate your competency when you achieve a passing score on the exam.

For information about the exam process and CBDM policy, download the CDM Credentialing Exam Candidate Handbook.

3. Pass the exam and complete the certification process.

To become certified, you must achieve a passing score on the exam and activate your certification within one year of passing the exam. (Certification will be automatically activated if you are already a current member of ANFP. However, membership in ANFP is not required.) If you are not a member of ANFP when you pass the exam, you will be sent an e-mail with information on how to activate the certification as well as how to join ANFP and enjoy the many member benefits that ANFP offers to you as a professional.

Once you earn the credential, you are required to comply with all recertification requirements to maintain use of the credential. This includes by completing/reporting continuing education and paying your annual certification fee. After activating your certification, the CDM, CFPP credential may be used as long as your certification is active, valid and in good standing.

CDM, CFPP is more than the letters after your name. It's a career path that demonstrates your commitment to excellence in nutrition and foodservice management, and defines you as a highly qualified professional in your field.

NOTE: It is your responsibility to ensure all contact information in your ANFP record is current and accurate. ANFP and CBDM are not responsible for missed communications due to inaccurate e-mail or mailing address, or for messages not accessed from a spam folder. Also, ANFP and CBDM are not responsible for any missed communications regarding any ANFP or CBDM matters for individuals who chose to opt out or unsubscribe from messages sent by ANFP or CBDM.

Should You Become a CDM, CFPP? Yes!

If you are already working in foodservice management you may wonder: Why earn the credential? The fact is: Those with the nationally-recognized CDM, CFPP credential are in demand due to regulatory requirements (vary by state). And...the credential translates into earning power! According to the ANFP Salary and Benefits Survey results, CDM, CFPPs earn more money than nutrition and foodservice professionals who are not certified.

Training Programs

Many students are already employed in food service, and complete their studies while working. One pathway to eligibility is completing ANFP Approved training programs that include a minimum of 120 hours of classroom instruction, supported by at least 150 hours of hands-on practice in nutrition and foodservice management. Core courses cover foodservice management, nutrition and medical nutrition therapy, human resources management, and food safety/sanitation. Some ANFP Approved training programs have a pathway for individuals who already have two years of foodservice management experience.

ANFP-approved training programs are available in most states. Available at nearly 100 colleges and universities and in most states, ANFP training programs are offered in classroom, correspondence and online formats. To explore training opportunities that may work for you, please visit the complete directory.

"Being a CDM, CFPP means that I can provide my residents with the quality food service experience they deserve. They can rest assured that I have the knowledge to ensure proper food safety and sanitation."

- Brittney Maderia, CDM, CFPP

Foodservice Manager Salary Info

ANFP conducts salary surveys on behalf of its members, to arm you with important facts in your career advancement. Results of ANFP's 2022 Compensation & Benefits Survey are in and the news is good!

Over 3,500 dietary managers participated. Over 47 percent indicated they had completed a dietary manager training program. Roughly 17 percent reported having a Bachelor's degree. Another 17 percent stated they had an Associate's degree. The most commonly reported job titles were: dietary manager; certified dietary manager; CDM, CFPP; and food services director. The majority held director level (single facility) or manager level positions.

Analysis of the survey's findings also revealed:

- The average full-time salary is $58,180.
- Those with CDM, CFPP credentials continue to earn more than those without them.
- Participants with a Master's degree or a Bachelor's degree earn the highest salaries.
- Participants employed in hospitals or continuing care retirement communities earn higher salaries.
- About 60 percent of participants work in skilled nursing facility/nursing home and 25 percent in hospitals.
- The greater the number of employees a nutrition and foodservice manager supervises, the larger the paycheck.
- Benefits most commonly reported by nutrition and foodservice professionals include paid holidays, medical insurance, life insurance, dental insurance, and pension plan or 401(k) plan.

To learn more and start your exam application, apply online (refer to www.CBDMonline.org/get-certified/register). Study materials and tips to help you prepare for the exam are available at www.CBDMonline.org.

Policies and procedures related to the exam are determined by the Certifying Board for Dietary Managers (CBDM), the credentialing agency of ANFP that is responsible for establishing and upholding policies for and administration of the CBDM Certification Program. In fact, Certified Dietary Manager, Certified Food Protection Professionals sit on this board, which also oversees development of the exam.

In addition, an accrediting body called the National Commission for Certifying Agencies (NCCA) has granted accreditation to the CBDM Certification Program for demonstrating compliance with the NCCA Standards for the accreditation of certification programs. These standards are designed to ensure that certification programs adhere to current standards of practice for the certification industry.

This level of excellence is one of the pieces that ensures your CDM, CFPP credential has meaning and value that will follow you throughout your career!

You Are Invited to Join ANFP!

Even before you achieve your CDM, CFPP certification, we invite you to join ANFP.

You will be teaming up with more than 15,000 professionals dedicated to providing optimum nutritional care through foodservice management.

What does ANFP deliver for you? Enjoy networking with like-minded professionals, a free subscription to ANFP's magazine Nutrition & Foodservice Edge (one of the most respected publications in the industry), up to 20% off ANFP publications, access to ANFPConnect, the ANFP member community, ANFP Job Board, ANFPtv, connections with your local chapter, and many more benefits. You will be invited to ANFP meetings both close to home and around the country.

Jumpstart your professional advancement today! Download a membership application today!

We're happy to assist you in your career planning. Learn more about ANFP and the CBDM Certification Program at our websites, www.ANFPonline.org and www.CBDMonline.org or call us at 800.323.1908.